

A Hui Kaua – © Kaufman & Perri 2014

Today I'm sailing far away out to sea
The island water's warm it calls to me
Once again the ocean wears its colors
Of gold and blue and green

Well I'll cross the bay, and round the point
To face the waves, that still anoint
Wayfaring ships and sailors
That venture out to sea, eeee

A hui kaua, till we meet again
Malama, malama pono, take care, it'll be alright
Till we meet again, two ships at sea
As we pass in sight, homeward bound again

The lighthouse winks its eye at me
The harbor mile marker calls me out
The gentle trade winds push me onward
To my new destiny

I'll cross the bay, and round the point
To face the waves, that still anoint
Wayfaring ships and sailors
That venture out to sea, eeee

A hui kaua, till we meet again
Malama, malama pono, take care, it'll be alright
Till we meet again, two ships at sea
As we pass in sight, homeward bound again

A hui kaua, till we meet again
Malama, malama pono, take care, it'll be alright
Take care, it'll be alright
